

DRIVE THROUGH INFORMATION FOR THE COMMUNITY

COVID-19 Drive through testing. You may have noticed drive through testing for the COVID-19 popping up in the community. Drive through testing offers a way for medical staff to safely collect samples from patients for diagnostic testing from individuals who are considered at risk for COVID-19. The drive through process prevents sick individuals in need of testing from entering hospitals, labs, and health care spaces where they may pose a risk to others for infection. Here is what you need to know:

- You need to call ahead. DO NOT come to a drive through site without calling ahead. Care providers are providing assessments and registering new patients over the phone prior to them arriving at the drive through locations. See the numbers below to call for various service providers in the community.
- Stay in your car. COVID-19 testing drive through facilities are just like a fast food drive through – you STAY IN YOUR CAR for the entire process. This is what keeps it safe for healthcare staff and for you.
- Bring your phone, and insurance card. To avoid unnecessary person-to-person contact, care providers rely on being able to communicate by phone with patients. Make sure you bring your cell phone with you, keep it charged, and ensure your care provider has the correct number on file for you. This is also important for follow communication, including reporting test results and monitoring your condition and care. If you have health coverage, bring your insurance card or coverage information as services or testing may be billed.
- Not everyone who wants a test will get a test. Supplies for testing are very limited. CDC Guidance is that testing be reserved for those with the highest risks. For many with mild to moderate symptoms a COVID-19 test may not be necessary. However, anyone who is symptomatic (fever, respiratory symptoms, cough) should be self-quarantining and monitoring themselves at home. Contact your usual healthcare provider if you are sick or have worsening symptoms and stay at home. In the meantime, have everyone in your house practice social distancing (stay about 5-6 feet apart), increase both handwashing and surface wiping along other home sanitation practices (including frequent bathroom and kitchen counter cleaning) as if they are contagious to protect others.

Screening, assessing and testing –what’s the difference?

- Screening: Screening is a set of questions or initial information gathered from a person to determine if there are any risk factors that need further investigation to protect themselves or others from COVID-19. You may be stopped when entering a building and asked questions about recent travel, symptoms of illness, or any underlying health issues. Please understand these are important precautions and do not enter offices directly. A person who screens positive for a risk factor may be referred on for further assessment or asked to take protective measures like wear a mask.
- Assessment: Assessment is a clinical evaluation by a medical professional to determine what may be causing symptoms and determine what diagnostic tests may be necessary to confirm a diagnosis. A provider may order a COVID-19 test or order other tests such as influenza or strep to determine the cause of a patient’s symptoms and determine appropriate treatment.
- Testing: Testing is the actual collection of samples from a person, and performing diagnostic tests to these samples to determine what is causing an illness. With test results, a provider is able to diagnose a condition, and recommend appropriate treatment. There is no treatment for COVID-19, therefore the recommended care plan may be to stay at home, self-care, and quarantine unless symptoms become more severe.
